The World Will Remain Weeping Only While It Refuses To Forgive Neither Itself Nor Others

I couldn't forgive my parents, but they overcame all of what I considered to be their wrongdoings anyway. So the world can do at least what I can.

The entire world is suffering right now, every single country on Earth right now. I literally can feel the heartbreak of all of them at the same time, but no more than would cause me to die or go mad. But I still need to know.

I only ask people to do one thing, and that is only that they would stop themselves from vowing never to forgive their friends, relatives, loved-ones, or anyone they consider to be one of their people, before they'd allow themselves to become the very same monster they have been accused of by someone else they consider to be a foreigner or even an enemy.

But in my experience, during this conflict, most have chosen to do that, and each and every time, they chose to punish someone they considered good, for the wrongdoings or misdeeds of someone who they considered bad, and who even directed those misdeeds towards or against that very same good person.

I'm saying, I probably have done that to people at some point, but I know that I don't even remember those times, so I grant that no one ever remembers moments when they've totally and completely lost their minds. Therefore, I suppose if we're all insane, then we can't consider anyone an enemy.

But do know this: I was willing to blame everyone's wrongdoings, not just to me personally, but also to anyone else, because I've always known for a fact, and stated it openly to as many people as I could, because someone else gave me proof that they themselves worked for evil, corrupt people in power, who planned and executed a mass-scale campaign of lies, deceit, and purposefully causing mass-hysteria, directed against their own people, for no other reason than just to cause pain and suffering.

But you know what? Every time I say I'm the only one who did anything, there's always someone I knew, forgot about, who did support me, and I forgot because I was worried about impressing someone else or just didn't think they were worth my time. And it will happen again, and I hope it does, because I would want more people on my side if I felt alone. So I still take credit from someone else's testimony. But at least I grovel for them occasionally, because I have no free will.

China smuggled masks to me personally, shipped by boat, which the Trump administration smuggled to me in turn, around the San Francisco Customs, which by then had already committed treason well before that, in the name of tyranny by imposing mask laws and curfews forever. That Chinese guy who made those masks for me wanted to help me, over himself and 200 other Chinese people, because he genuinely believed in OUR fake virus story, which we made up entirely to befall on and blame only on, working men like him in both our countries.

The Chinese Viceroy, who runs Australia's CIA, as well as the whole of Australia and probably New Zealand too, will even lie about being offended, but then truly feel offended, on behalf of all White "Chinese" Womxn but only who follow her on Twitter, and direct the beams of her offendedness at only me personally, for not surrendering my free will to them to help spread the lie that the real Chinese (yes they'd make sure to say they weren't real) had engineered it using technology a U.S. professor stole, to kill us all, and my family and friends agreed with the Chinese Premier of Australia (who was likely a white woman from a rich family who considers herself a Black Chinese Man, Woman, Something, she's just going to blame it on white men anyway because three of my exes already vowed or already attempted to do the same to me personally).

Well if Prince Harry is willing to blame his mom, then I'll blame his mom too. I'll blame his whole damn country just for that guy, but I'll blame any country who actually attacks America but Americans themselves won't blame for killing them. But he himself gets a break, because his wife is American, and she has a fake L.A.-style spray-on tan just to fool black people here, not in the U.K. (who are even more persecuted than ours but far more educated!) Which means, (yes she's a dumb-ass, but I'm no better than him. I'm NO BETTER than that man do you hear?).

But Oprah is well aware of and supports his wife's plans, is truly black herself, and yet she wants white women to win, even above black women, even as someone who achieved what no one before her was able to. And I'd even accept being considered racist by black people who were not Oprah as long as I was wrong about that.

But, for now, I believe Harry's mom wins for every second that Oprah is on TV. The blacks tell all of us who they don't like, and my own mom tells me that's why she loves Oprah. I'd trust my mother to her grave when she tells me why she loves someone in the name of hatred. I'm willing to consider that every black man I've ever seen on TV and admired for being Samuel L. Jackson but was actually Denzel Washington probably betrayed his people at one point or another, but we all have, we all have. (I consider Denzel to be one of my heroes, no kidding).

But I've also seen Nazi prison guards who give respect to each black man who enters the prison by letting them out early, making sure they got better rooms than they did when they slept in the same cell-block for murder, and getting smuggled goodies in for them too. And they did it because they consider them to have beaten them fair and square more than once with a white girl they were in love with at the time behind their back. They both let themselves still feel racist in exchange for granting forgiveness to each other, especially when they get put in a cell for something they didn't do or they didn't deserve to be punished for. Betraying our people is what makes peace possible. Anyone who is a citizen is among our people, but as long as you can be yourselves and among your own people, right next to different ones with no conflict between you, then you'd be considered among the nation. Harry's wife was a U.S. Citizen the entire time she got married and became a Duchess, and we still call her by her aristocratic British title, but Harry gave up all of his, and I can't see any other reason he'd do it, if he didn't fully support America, or his wife forced him to. But then she'd have to be on our side as well. I just side with Harry because I know the look in his eyes, but I'd do everything the same way he did.

If that woman who handed me state-secrets and who was willing to be unjustly convicted of “treason”, who had in the past worked for several media institutions, as well as God-knows how many ultra-secret Department of Defense projects, if she can hand me proof, which I can then go on to show to others who came to me to beg me, crying, to help them understand why their best friends have killed themselves, or even turned against them suddenly and even violently, but who then declare themselves enemies of mine because I exposed their masters’ secret plan(s) for world domination, well then I can easily consider them to have gone momentarily mad just at that point. It’s happened to me, I know who they truly are, and because I just saw my own parents instantly poof back to sanity without me even doing anything after literally vowing to destroy me for insulting Satan and Dr. Fauci. They just “poof” right to sanity anyway after a certain point, and I mean it!

I’ll grant that she too declared me an enemy (but only to her personally, not the state, and certainly not to Lucifer if Mephistopheles doesn’t get credit before her) for considering that she might not be completely deserving of being tortured to insanity, by those same evil people, but to be honest, I feel much more highly of her than I’ve even been capable of displaying, and she considers me completely deserving of the insanity she imposed on me, which I’ve described to almost everyone I’ve ever known plus anyone who reads my words here many, many times. Everyone knows I’m okay with at least that kind of insanity, though, because it means she has that same kind for me.

Plus, how else is she going to get me to expose every piece of information she’s given me, if I wasn’t also perfectly in agreement with everything she has ever said or will ever say due to my regard for her? It’s how I have confidence.

Besides, I was willing to lie under oath to cover up my wife's affairs, as well as all of her crimes and misdemeanors if I had to, as well as forge fraudulent evidence for affairs with women she made up herself, just to put on our papers, even after I'd personally offered to provide her with direct proof for the real ones, just so she could get away with having beaten me in the divorce court. I'd do it for her. We forgive each other. So I make sure that she and my best buddies, as well as theirs, hers, and all my previous girlfriends and affair partners who were already in court as sworn witnesses, always know about everything I've ever done wrong to just my wife.

But also, I'd never do that without saying guys exaggerate a lot, because we know we don't get whatever we claim to have, so why should you fear that so much? Besides, we don't even really get jealous at each other anyway, because we are usually talking to the other man about how much it sucks having just the "emotional" affair. It hurts. You better fuck that man if you're gonna complain about me to him.

My ex-wife never turns down a challenge. Never. Even after we submitted the paperwork, if I opened a text message in another room she'd text me "Who is that whore?", and I'd instantly know for certain it was from someone I had at that exact moment just considered feeling some sexual attraction for, before even opening it. And sometimes that message from said whore would say "Do whatever your wife wants someone else to do for her before you even consider your own needs, let alone your own wants." This was a whore who turns down a challenge. They dishonor my wife's entire tribe. I don't even grant them the honor of being considered a whore.

So consider that Buddhists in Myanmar, and probably in most of Asia, are being attacked and put in prison by their military governments for offending their supreme commander, whoever she may be. That's no soldier, and anyone who obeys any orders from her is no soldier. No soldier has ever disrespected me before, even when I was and still am short, skinny, not suit for physical labor let alone combat, and even after I'd willingly disrespected them.

But Thailand's military considers it illegal, and so does my own government, for smuggling any religious items in or out of Thailand. But I also know that my teachers, who were white and Thai, and their teachers, who were mainly Thai, have disrespected their soldiers even after they wished to study under them.

That's why I can't support Thailand, even just by translating my own words into Thai, before I'd do it in Burmese first, unless Thailand's monks were willing to fight against Myanmar's military wearing the same monk robes and barefoot, still taking on alms rounds and adhering to all the monk rules.

I'd believe they'd still easily win, easily, just because anyone who threatens Buddhists knowingly, or puts them in jail for being Buddhist, would scream in terror at the sight of an army of elderly monks walking slowly towards them just to ask them if they needed any help defending themselves from the peasants and children toiling the fields and working to feed their families.

So, I don't understand why they wouldn't do it, if they also won't teach their soldiers who protect them. Honestly, I do love Thailand's King, because he displays his flaws to everyone, which means he's willing to denigrate himself before anyone else in his country could be arrested by a law imposed and enforced against his own decrees in the name of "defaming" him.

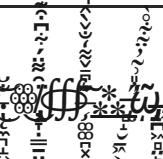

I'm willing to accept that everything I've heard about any of the situations in Asia mentioned right here could have been false misinformation, disseminated from my own country, to our own news services, because I've got proof that my government would do that. I know they would rather put me in jail for telling the truth at all, to anyone, for any reason, because they've told me they wanted it to happen to me again and again many times, usually delivered to me as a message from a "honeypot." I've got dozens and dozens of testimony from honeypots of all stripes, some foreign, some domestic, some ex-girlfriends, some future flings, I can't even keep track anymore. It's not fair. Give some honeypots to someone else for once, okay? Their own husbands apologize to me, with them in person, for distracting me with their wife, so maybe send them to other nations for once! They could really use the help right now!

But also, just remember that fertility drugs will make any woman into a honeypot, it happens to couples who are trying to conceive together, now very common in professional metro-areas once you reach your 30s. Many women forgo having children until they have a career first. I risked my financial future so my ex-wife could have a baby earlier, and it still worked out just fine, because babies are difficult but almost everyone at my company was able to get married and have a kid anyway because we got benefits and paid leave. Fertility drugs do make any woman who take them refuse to have sex with their husband, as well as mystically transform them into 10+s, but only flirt with other men, and none of the men involved even get jealous and they usually even commend you for it (For what? They only enjoy being wanted, but to take it away as soon as you say so). If he and I are both confused, bewildered, but happy, I'm willing to at least suggest that the drugs don't work very well, but as long as everyone's happy, who cares?

If you at least are willing to consider that any evil act you have ever heard about or even one you witnessed yourself - even directed at you - may have been done by a person who at that moment had no free will at all, then you are capable of forgiving anyone for any reason. That's the best attitude you can have, and if most people would do that, not even all, just most, there would be no war.
